by on: to s. on a book, Wiv. I, 4, 156. Tp. II, 2, 130. Merch. II, 2, 168. V, 301. Wint. III, 2, 125. H4A II, 4, 371. Hml. I, 5, 145 etc.

3) With the words oath or vow as objects, = to make, to take: that (vow) they swore, Lucr. 1848. I have sworn deep oaths, Sonn. 152, 9. Pilgr. 92. LLL I, 1, 65. II, 97. V, 2, 451. Merch. H6C III, 1, 72 etc. The word vow subject of the active verb: God keep all vows unbroke that s. to thee, R2 IV, 215 (Ff are made).

4) to put to an oath, to cause to take an oath: were you sworn to the duke or to the deputy? Meas. IV, 2, 196. s. me to this, LLL I, 1, 69. the first inter'gatory that my Nerissa shall be sworn on, Merch. IV, 4, 13. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command, I tell you this, Ant. V, 2, 198. II, 2, 35. being sworn my soldier, John III, 1, 125. being my sworn servant, the duke retained him his, H8 I, 2, 191. her attendants are all sworn and honorable, Cymb. But is haft or heft, i. e. handle, indeed that which holds or contains, or not rather that by which a thing is held? Loose in the handle, applied to a person, could not possibly mean any thing else than what loose in the heft is said to have designated. Tharsus (M. Edd. mostly Tarsus) name of a town (Tarsus in Cilicia?): Per. I, 2, 115. I, 4, 21. 55. II Prol. 11 etc. Changed to Thasos or Thassos by M. Edd. in Caes. V, 4, 28. Mcb. IV, 3, 225 etc. (never which I am). A difference apparently observed between that and other relatives: my heart bleeds to think o' the teen that I have turned you to, which is from my remembrance, Tp. I, 2, 64. hail, many-coloured messenger that ne'er dost disobey the wife of Jupiter, who with thy saffron wings ... diffusest honey-drops, IV, 76. it was the swift celerity of his death, which I did think with slower foot came on, that brained my purpose, Meas. III, 7, 89.

But often quite = who or which, in appositional and merely descriptive clauses: nature that made thee ... saith that the world hath ending with thy life, Ven. 11. there they hoist us, to cry to the sea that roared to us, Tp. V, 1, 85 etc. Alternating with who and which, without any perceptible difference (but never, like which, referring to a whole sentence): you, brother mine, that entertain ambition, expelled remorse and nature; who, with Sebastian, would here have killed your king, Tp. V, 75. sometime like apes that mow and chatter at me and after bite me, then like hedgehogs which lie tumbling in my way, ... sometime am I all wound with adders who with cloven tongues do hiss me into madness, II, 2, 9. to her whose state is such that cannot choose but lend and give where she is sure to lose; that seeks not to find that her search implies, All's I, 3, 222. it is an heretic that makes the fire, not she which burns in't, Wint. The principal sentence omitted, and the subordinate clause (with should) expressing indignant surprise: that a brother should be so perfidious! Tp. I, 2, 67 (i. e. it is strange, or incredible; or can it be that etc.). that a monster should be such a natural! III, 2, 36. 'mongst all foes that a friend should be the worst! Gent. H6C II, 5, 95 (would). R3 I, 3, 257. Tim. IV, 3, 281 etc.

Likewise the use of not that to be explained by an ellipsis (originally: I do not say, I do not pretend that); a) not that = not because, not inasmuch as: she would have me as a beast: not that, I being a beast, she would have me, but that she, being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me, Err. III, 2, 87. we have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, ... but that our wits are so diversely coloured, Cor. Indicating, after adjectives, the person or thing, with respect to which, or in whose interest, a quality is shown or perceived (whereas, in general, of serves to designate the object or material, in or by which the quality shows itself; f. i. she is too liberal of her tongue, Gent. III, 1, 355, = she spends her tongue too liberally; you are liberal of your loves, H8 II, 1, 126; but liberal to mine own children in good bringing up, Shr. I, 1, 98; free of speech, Oth. III, 3, 185; but free and bounteous to her mind, I, 3, 266): servile to my coy disdain, Ven. 112. to thine own face affected, 157. subject to the tyranny of mischances, 737. contrary to the Roman laws, Lucr. The same difference between the accusative and dative after verbs (the near and distant objects of grammarians): mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee, Lucr. 577. left me to a bootless inquisition, Tp. I, 2, 35. subject his coronet to his crown, 114. give a name to every fixed star, LLL I, 1, 89 etc. etc. To omitted: when dreams do show thee me, Sonn. 43, 14 (= thee to me). I'll yield him thee asleep, Tp. IV, 2, 85. cf. Apply. Of its omission, when the dative is placed before the accusative, every page offers instances.

Placed after the noun: what to? Rom. III, 1, 15. my father did something smack, something grow to, Merch. II, 2, 18. As for Wint. I, 2, 437: your followers I will whisper to the business, cf. Whisper.

To, the infinitival particle, used in general as at present. The infinitive having the force of the subject of the sentence, f. i. to get it is thy duty, Ven. 168. to die and go we know not where, ... 'tis too horrible, Meas. I, 2, 107 etc. etc. Serving, in short, as at present, to give a special determination to any general notions, negative as well as positive. To treat this matter thoroughly, would almost be as much as to write an English grammar; therefore, referring the reader to the several words, which are followed by an infinitive with to, we confine ourselves to such cases as have found no place in other articles.
